Description

This conference will address the topic of violence as a public health problem through a theological and social ecology lens. The conference will give attendees information about violence and peacemaking as well as concrete, practical interventions and programs with proven success. Speakers will share conceptual frameworks and personal experiences of violence and healing in our communities.

Who Should Attend

This activity is intended for practitioners, educators and students in the following areas: parish and community ministry, youth ministry and advocacy, family therapy, health professions, medicine, nursing, allied health disciplines, spirituality and pastoral care, ethics, public health, the humanities, psychology, clergy, family therapists, chaplaincy, social work and community based organizations

Objectives

After attending this activity, the participant should be able to:

- 1) Explore theological, spiritual and pastoral implications and considerations of violence
- 2) Discuss the practical advice given by practitioners in the field of violence prevention
- 3) Discuss violence as a public health problem: causation, manifestation and consequences
- 4) Analyze the impact of beliefs on the concepts of violence and healing
- 5) Identify strategies and effective program components in the prevention of violence and promotion of healing

Accreditation Statement

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education through the joint sponsorship of The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, The Johns Hopkins Hospital Department of Pastoral Care, The Johns Hopkins Center for Prevention of Youth Violence, The Institute for Johns Hopkins Nursing, The Johns Hopkins School of Nursing Department of Community Public Health and The Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health. The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians.
